I'm supposed to fly on the 5th, but I live in Illinois. Can't get on a plane with my id. I have a passport, but it might be expired. So I might just be driving instead.

3 Not a bad idea. The airlines could arbitrarily cancel flights into DC if it looks like millions of patriots are going to march on DC to stop the steal

1 Why can't you use your ID? That real id requirement has been pushed back until next October

2 Oh, I didn't know they pushed it back.

2 Yup. Covid pushed back the implementation date as state DMVs were closed for months and are trying to catch up on the backlog. I'm lucky I got my IL license renewed back in July. In all likelihood, people could have their license be expired for over a year before it gets renewed thanks to this Covid bullshit

It's almost certainly going to be delayed again. Chances are many states closed their DMVs due to the pandemic, and will have a backlog to catch up on

The Illinois Real ID issue does not go into affect until October 2021. You should have no trouble flying.

I believe passports never expire as official IDs.

I am in Northwest suburbs and was going to fly and have two flights booked but also reserved a car from Ohare on the 4th so I would not have my car beat up by pantifa.

Where in Illinois? What is your ID? Regular Driver's License or state ID will be OK.. REALID was postponed to Oct 2021. I am in the NW Chicago suburbs and was thinking of flying or driving but didn't want to go alone.

East Central area. About 45 minutes south of Champaign.
